Gen. Fred D. Grant is reported stricken with an affliction of the throat similar to that of his father.

There was an eclipse of the moon April 1, visible in Europe, Asia and Africa. The sun will rise in eclipse in New England April 17, but the eclipse will be invisible in other parts of the United States.

Albert Bacon Fall, United States Senator from New Mexico for the long term, is a native of Frankfort and his election adds to the long list of distinguished men that Kentucky has given to other States. Judge Fall is a grandson of the late Rev.
Philip S. Fall.

Total damages of $26,000 were awarded against the American Tobacco Company by a jury in the United States District Court in the anti-trust suit brought by the People's Tobacco Co. of New Orleans for alleged conspiracy to destroy competition.

A special cable from Tokio says Japan has succeeded in securing the long coveted concessions at Magdalena Bay from Mexico. The cable says:
"It is reported that negotiations between Mexico and Japan were concluded a few days ago for the establishment of a large Japanese settlement at Magdalena Bay, but an American protest based on Monroe doctrine is expected."

A Log On The Track of the fast express means serious trouble ahead if not removed, so does loss of appetite. It means lack of vitality, loss of strength and nerve weakness. If appetite fails, take Electric Bitters quickly to overcome the cause, toning up the stomach and curing the indigestion. Michael Hess, son of Lincoln, Neb., had been sick over three years, but six bottles of Electric Bitters put him right on his feet again. They have helped thousands. They give pure blood, strengthen nerves, good digestion.

Only 50 cents at all druggists.

There was no tragedy, however.
Seems the baby had gotten hold of a lead pencil and marked up the euchre deck.

She Was Smothering

Rockford, Ala.—Mrs. M. C. Paschal, of this place, says: "I was taken with nervous prostration, and had headache, backache, pains in my right side, and smothering spells. I called in physicians to treat my case, but without relief. Finally, I tried Cardui, and it gave perfect satisfaction. I recommend it to every sick woman." Are you weak, tired, worn-out? Do you suffer from any of the pains peculiar to weak women? Cardui has a record of over fifty years in relieving such troubles, and will certainly benefit you. It prevents those frequent headaches, and keeps you up, out of bed, feeling happy. Try Cardui.

PUTTING HIS FOOT IN IT.

A local preacher who was in the habit of taking his wife with him to his preaching appointments said, on arrival at the chapel, "My dear, you go in there; you will be all right. I must go round to the vestry."

In the vestibule the wife was met by a kind-hearted steward, who, after giving her a hearty welcome and a hymn book, conducted her to a comfortable seat.

At the close of the service the same kind-hearted steward gave her a hearty shake of the hand, adding how pleased he would be to see her at the services each Sunday. Then, whispering, he said: "But, let me tell you, we don't get a duffer like this in the pulpit every Sunday."

Fortunes In Faces.

There's often much truth in the saying "her face is her fortune," but its never said where pimples, skin eruptions blotches, or other blemishes disfigure it. Impure blood is back of them all, and shows the need of Dr. King's New Life Pills.
They promote health and beauty.
Try them. 25 cents at all druggists.

"It seemed that my 14-year old boy would have to lose his leg, on account of an ugly ulcer, caused by

Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and cured

AMUSEMENTS

Eugene Walter's greatest play,
"The Wolf," a drama of the Hudson Bay country, is said to be one of the greatest successes of the season. It deals with a rugged manhood of that far northern country which resists and defeats the plans of an adventurer among women. The cast is made up of the pick of the dramatic profession, and Manager Holland take pleasure in offering at the Opera House Thursday night, April 4.

A Firm Hand

By Bryant C. Rogers

Many times before Dorris Chatterton had reached the age of sixteen her father and mother had said:
"That girl needs a firm controlling hand, or she'll take the reins and drive the team."

Dorris didn't want to be bossed. She wanted to boss others. She had a will that struck sparks of fire when opposed, and even when her father put his foot down hard he wasn't quite satisfied that he had won a victory.

At eighteen Dorris had settled down to the belief that she ran the house and all in it, besides the township, the county and parts of two adjoining counties. All this, and yet she had no enemies and few critics. It came so natural to her to domineer that people insensibly gave way to it. She didn't go around with a chip on her shoulder, but she just sailed along having her way.

Miss Dorris was fond of horseback riding. Gallants used to run out from the city to ride with her. There were also others living near by. For instance, there was a young Mr. Percy, who was deeply in love. His mother backed his suit, and almost the first thing she told him was:

"Dorris is very self-willed and strong-minded, and you must be careful not to cross her. At the same time, give her to understand that should a heroic occasion arise she will find you a hero. It will be well to let her know that you had three ancestors in the Revolutionary war."

Young Percy was making his courtship on the lines laid down, when the two went riding one afternoon. The road they took was being improved by the state at a long, steep hill.
There was a natural wall of rock there, and it was being blasted for material to spread on the road. In order that the workmen might have a clear field, and to avoid injury to travelers, a new road had been cut around the hill for temporary use and signs put up. Neither rider knew of the change until reaching the road. Mr.

The two went riding one afternoon

Percy had no complaints to make, but Miss Dorris Chatterton had. That change had been made without notifiing her. She had been ignored and she didn't propose to stand it.
"Where you going?" she demanded of the young man as he reined into the new road.

"We've got to go this way."
"We've got to do nothing of the kind. We shall go straight up the hill."

"But read that sign. It says: 'Blasting! Dangerous!'"
"Then you had better turn back!" was the reply as the girl headed up the hill, which had several turns in it.
Mr. Percy remembered what his mother had told him and followed.
At the first turn they found five laborers, and one of them held up his hand and said:
"No way here. You must take the other road."
"I shall go straight ahead!" said Miss Dorris.
"Certainly we will," added Mr.
Percy.

"But you can't."
But they did. At the next turn they came upon a man who was inspecting a broken drill. He was not over twenty-three years old, and though having his coat off and overalls drawn over his trousers no one could mistake him for one of the workmen. He was clean-shaven, had a fine face and big black eyes, and his voice was pleasant as he lifted his hat to the girl and said:
"Didn't you read the signs at the foot of the hill?"
"What if I did?"
"The road is impassable from this turn on, and we are blasting at the top. You will have to turn back."
"I shall go on!"

If the signs had read "Blasting!
Dangerous! Keep right on and get your damned head blown off!" she would have refused to comply. And the fact that the man before her was doubtless the engineer in charge of the work, instead of a laborer, nettled her. He was polite, but she saw by his mouth that he could be firm.

"You will turn back please," he said as he reached out a hand and caught her bridle.

"Let go, sir—let go!"
It was time for Mr. Percy's revolutionary blood to boil and his heroism to come to the front.

"Scoundrel, let us pass!" he shouted, urging his horse forward.

His rein was seized, his horse turned and given a slap that sent it trot-ing down hill, and then the man with the big black eyes raised his hat again and quietly said:

"Take the other road, please." Miss Dorris gave him one awful look, gritted her teeth and retreated.
She was defeated, but only for the time. The man's scalp should dangle at her belt ere many more suns had risen. Mr. Percy was waiting at the foot of the hill, and as the girl reached him he began:

"I say, now—"
"Say nothing," she snapped.

"But, you know—"
"I know you went off as mild as a lamb, and I shan't need your protection on any future occasions!"

Mr. Percy's ancestors had been weighed in the balance and found 14 ounces to the pound. The ride was cut short, and Miss Dorris sat down in her shady bower to think of the man who had turned her back. Oh, how she hated him! Did she? Well, he had made her obey him, but he had nice eyes. He had been firm, but he was almost handsome. The same voice that had commanded also struck her ears pleasantly. He wasn't so bad after all, but he had bossed when he might have coaxed. That man must be taught a lesson.

Miss Dorris said nothing to her father or mother, or to the cook or gardener. She didn't even record it in her diary that she had determined to do a desperate thing on the morrow. At ten o'clock in the forenoon she mounted her horse and cantered away for Bull hill. Same signs of "Dangerous! Blasting!" The same laborers at the first turn sought to turn her back. She gave them a look of scorn and passed on, but she heard them shouting after her. There was no one at the second turn, but as she drew rein a man came running down the hill, waving his cap and shouting.

It was the man of the big black eyes and the firm mouth. He intended to head her off again. The light of battle shone in the girl's eyes.

"For heaven's sake, ride for your life!" shouted the man.

Miss Dorris didn't make a move.
"There's a blast to be fired right where you are!"

Still no move.
The man reached her, dragged her from her horse, and though she fought and struggled he carried her 50 feet up the hill. Then came a blast that tore a thousand cart-loads of rocks and dirt loose. For three minutes the sky seemed to rain missiles and was darkened with smoke, and girl had been thrown down by the concussion. He was the first up, and as he extended his hand to help her he said:

"I trust you are not hurt yourself, but look down there!"
"My horse?"
"Blown to fragments!"
"And I—!"

"You would have been. I even think you ought to have got a broken arm for your obstinacy!"
"Sir!"

"If you were three or four years younger I'd say you ought to have your ears boxed."

"Sir, don't talk to me like that. Oh, you are bleeding! Your head is cut open! You—you—"

They sat down on a rock—he because of a faintness—she because she wanted to weep. She did weep. She said she was a perverse, obstinate girl. She said she ought to have been hurt, too. She said—and he said—and the trembling man that came down the hill to look for the remains of Bently Davis, engineer, found the two holding hands. Only the other day the father said to the mother:

"Well, I'm amazed at the way Dorris is getting over her pig-headedness.
Do you think that she and Mr.
Davis—"

"Jacob, attend to your pipe and newspaper!" chided the wife.

"Running Amuck."

The expression "run amuck" is the Anglicized form of a term used in some parts of the orient to describe a form of homicidal mania, accompanied by a frenzied plunge in any and every direction. In the countries where the malady originated the word applied to it was "amok." The corrupted form of it is now applied in a score of ways—without much warrant.

In Malacca, Siam, Java, and adjacent regions the mental state which causes amok is well defined and much dreaded. It is attributed almost invariably to excessive drinking of stimulants.
The victim first turns morose, generally remaining in this state for several days. Then he is suddenly seized with the mania for slaughter and starts on his mad run with the first weapon he can reach.

Extra precautions against these mad ravages are taken in some of the more civilized places, especially Batavia.
There the police are armed with what is called a catch-fork. The instant the victim of amok starts on his mad dash he finds himself hooked by the minion of the law and held firmly the length of this odd human spear. He can harm himself, but that is the limit of his insane power.

Confused Anatomy.

The elephant never fails to excite wonder in the person who beholds him for the first time. A writer in the Christian Register quotes the remark of a small boy who was visiting a menagerie. "O papa," he exclaimed, as they passed before the elephant, "look at the big cow with her horns in her mouth, eating hay with her tail!"
